

Preconception Health

This program is presented by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

[Woman 1] Me, have a baby? Are you kidding? I work a part-time job and I'm getting ready to go to college to be a nurse. I'll choose when I want to start a family; until then, I'm gonna stay on my birth control pills. I wanna do well in school to get a good job, so, I'm taking care of my health. Now, don't get me wrong, I have my fun—but I don't do illegal drugs or go crazy partying and drinking. I quit smoking. It was hard, but with help, I did it. I see my doctor for regular checkups and make sure my vaccinations are up-to-date. I can't afford to let something get me down. The doctor suggested I take a multivitamin every day to get all the folic acid I need. Between school, a part time job, family, and friends, I'm pretty busy. But, I eat healthy and I try to stay physically active. Nothing's gonna stop me from living my dreams.

[Woman 2] Me? Have a baby? We're thinking about it, in the next year or so.

[Man] Well, it's a major decision, so there's a lot to think about and to plan for.

[Woman 2] We've talked to the doctor about wanting a baby in the near future and she told us about the importance of preconception health.

[Man] I said "pre-what?"

[Woman 2] She explained preconception health is just what it sounds like . . . a woman's health before getting pregnant and how it can affect the health of her baby.

[Man] Well that caught our attention!

[Woman 2] I didn't know that what I do before I get pregnant can affect the health of our baby! So, I asked my doctor what I needed to do to get ready for my pregnancy and she said I should start by taking a multivitamin with folic acid every day. She also asked us some questions about our family health histories—we'll have to talk more about that with our families.

[Man] She reminded us that we need to be physically active. That's why we're out here now.

[Woman 2] And we've started preparing healthier meals, too. We're in this together! No illegal drugs, drinking, or smoking, which I don't do anyway. My doctor also wants to switch me to medicines that are safer for pregnant women to take. And, all our vaccinations are up to date.

[Man] We've still got a lot of planning to do,

[Woman 2] But at least we now know about preconception health and why it's so important for me . . . and for our baby-to-be.

[Woman 3] Me, have another baby? No estoy lista!—I'm not ready! No. I'm making sure to use birth control correctly until Juan and I are ready for more children. That won't be anytime soon. I have my hands full with Rosa! She's 17 months old now and really active. The doctor said that Juan and I should wait at least 18 months before getting pregnant again . . . but, I'd like to wait a little longer. After Rosa was born, my doctor reminded me that I need to take good care of myself—so I can keep up with her!

He told me to keep eating healthy and stay physically active, and to keep taking a multivitamin with folic acid every day. He also said don't smoke or use illegal drugs—and no more than one alcohol drink a day. But I know that when we start trying to get pregnant again, I can't drink anything with alcohol in it at all. I have diabetes and need to keep my blood sugar in control, especially before getting pregnant again. I know that if I don't keep my blood sugar in control it can affect my health and the health of my next baby. So, I make regular doctor visits so that I keep a close watch on that. Rosa gets her vaccinations, and so do I! I want to be as healthy as I can so that I can keep up with this little one.
