CDC... Permission Granted

[Announcer] This podcast is presented by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. CDC – safer, healthier people.

Welcome to Ask CDC, the weekly podcast that answers your questions. I'm your host, Susan Laird.

Our question this week is from someone who found great information on the CDC website and would like permission to use some photos and other material on his own website and in some of his brochures.

First, thanks for your interest in our public health topics. Generally, everything produced by the CDC is in the public domain. That means it's for public use and free of any copyright restrictions. Permission is not required for use of public domain items, but CDC does ask that you credit the original institution and contributor, when known, whenever the item is used in any publicly distributed media. You are also free to adapt and revise CDC materials, however, you must remove the CDC name and logo if any changes are made.

For more information, go to www.cdc.gov, or call 1-800-CDC-INFO.

Thanks for listening. To submit your question to Ask CDC, email us at askcdc@cdc.gov.
